Dear Proofreading Team,

The editor of the Manchester Journal of Transnational Islamic Law & Practice has suggested that I send my paper for proofreading. Please see the manuscript in the attached file and kindly confirm the receipt.

I am looking forward to hearing from you.

Best regards,

Dear Author,

The edited version of your article is attached. We have used track changes to make all the corrections and added comments where further action is revision is required from you.

Regarding the subject matter, the paper consists of large chunks of data with very little analysis. Arguments are not fully developed, and you have moved on to next sections before properly elaborating key points. For instance, the concept of falah is explained early on but is barely mentioned or relied upon later in the paper. I acknowledge the need to be succinct, but it should not come at the cost of analysis which is the backbone of research. I would also suggest that you consider changing their paper’s structure, if feasible, as the current structure leaves much to be desired; for example, the part titled “Enhancing Zakat Management: Strategies for Success” seems to provide recommendations, therefore seems out of place at its current placement. Therefore, I recommend that the paper be comprehensively overhauled before further review is conducted by external reviewers.

Please make all the required changes and send the article back to me. I will take another look before we initiate the external review process. Please note that it is very important that the revisions are made properly. Otherwise, the external reviewer may reject the paper.

Best wishes,
Gul

Dear Gul,

Thank you for your feedback and the edited version of my article. I understand your concerns regarding the lack of analysis and the structure of the paper. I will work on developing the arguments further, and will look into the paper deeply.

I'll address all comments and resubmit the revised version soon.

Best regards,

Dear Gul,

I sent the revised manuscript via email a few days ago. Could you please confirm if you have received it? If not, I have attached the files again for your convenience.

Once confirmed, could you also advise on the next steps for the publication process?

Looking forward to your response.

Best regards,

Dear Romi,

We have adopted all your revisions and made some further edits to ensure compliance with the journal style. We have also highlighted footnotes where translations for non-English references are required according to the journal style. Please add the translations and send the final version back to Dr Ahmad. He will advise you further.

Best Regards,
Ahmad
